Dear Mrs. Philip,

I am away on holiday and so have only just heard the very sad news.

Please accept the assurance of my most sincere sympathy.

I myself feel a real personal loss.

I have known your husband for thirty years and had a great respect for him both in business and for his kindness and charm. It is difficult to express one's feelings at such a time but it may help you a little to know that I, and, all who knew him in London, are sharing your grief.

Yours sincerely,

J. R. Whiting
